Sino-Indian Border: Peiping announced on 13 January that Chinese withdrawals would resume on 14 and 15 January "along the entire Sino-Indian border."

No withdrawals have been noted since the end of December. Peiping's present move seems timed to increase pressure on New Delhi to agree to the Colombo conference proposals during Ceylonese Prime Minister Bandaranaike's current visit to India. The Chinese claim their new pull-backs will place their military forces behind "the line of actual control of November 1959," the line they have proposed as a basis for a continuing cease-fire.

Indian Foreign Secretary Desai told Ambassador Galbraith on 11 January that the proposals brought from Peiping by Mrs. Bandaranaike reflected no change in the Chinese position. Peiping had not gone beyond its own proposals of 30 December, which Nehru rejected on 1 January. Desai said the Chinese "positive response" to the Colombo conference proposals represented merely a willingness to use them as a basis for starting talks, which the Indians would not accept.

Mrs. Bandaranaike's discussions in New Delhi were carried over an extra day. This suggests that the Indians are trying to avoid a flat rejection by offering some form of counterproposal.
